Alarmes. Enter Warwicke.

War. Sore ſpent with toile, as runners with the race,
I lay me downe a little while to breathe,
For ſtrokes receiude, and many blowes repaide,
Hath robd my ſtrong knit ſinewes of their ſtrength,
And force perforce, needs muſt I reſt my ſelfe.

Enter Edward.

Edw. Smile gentle heauens, or ſtrike vngentle death,
That we may die vnleſſe we gaine the day:
What fatall ſtarre malignant frownes from heauen,
Vpon the harmeleſſe line of Yorkes true houſe?

Enter George.

George. Come brother come, lets to the field againe,
For yet there's hope enough to win the day:
Then let vs backe to cheere our fainting Troopes,
Leaſt they retire now we haue left the field.

War. How now my Lords, what hap? what hope of good?

Enter Richard running.

Rich. Ah Warwicke, why haſt thou withdrawne thy ſelfe?
Thy noble father in the thickeſt throngs,
Cride ſtill for Warwicke, his thrice valiant ſonne,
Vntill with thouſand ſwords he was beſet,
And many wounds made in his aged breſt,
And as he tottring ſate vpon his ſteede,
He waft his hand to me, and cride aloud,
Richard, commend me to my valiant ſonne,
And ſtill he cride, Warwicke reuenge my death,
And with thoſe words he tumbled off his horſe,
And ſo the noble Salsbury gaue vp the ghoſt.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with his bloud,
Ile kill my horſe, becauſe I will not flie:
And heere to God of heauen I make a vow,
Neuer to paſſe from forth this bloudy field,

Till

Yorke

Till I am full reuenged for
Edw. Lord Warwicke, I do
And in that vow now ioyn
Thou ſetter vp and puller d
Vouchſafe a gentle victory
Or let vs die before we loſe
George. Then let vs haſte
And call them pillars that
And highly promiſe to rem
Their truſty ſeruice, in thes
Rich. Come, come away
For yet is hope of fortune
Brothers, giue me your han
And take our leaues, vntill
Where ere it be, in heauen
Now I that neuer wept, nov
To ſee theſe dire miſhaps
Warwicke, farewell.
War. Away, away, once

Alarmes, and the
and Cl

Rich. A Clifford, a Clifford
Clif. A Richard, a Richard
Rich. Now Clifford, for
This thirſty ſword that lon
Shall lop thy limbes, and ſli
For to reuenge the murder
Clif. Now Richard, I am
This is the hand that ſtab'd
And this the hand that ſlew
And heere's the heart that
And cheeres theſe hands th
To execute the like vpon t
And ſo haue at thee.